The Official Series Titles

Title rule: every series is named after its character's or team's full comic-book name, with no shortened, “grounded,” or disguised versions. This follows the DCTVU canon policy, under which heroes use their codenames from day one.

Slot	Title	Network / run	Why this title
Live-Action 1	GREEN ARROW	The CW, 2012–2020	The character's real name. A shortened title like “Arrow” would signal a toned-down hero, and the DCTVU doesn't tone anyone down. It's also the first DCTVU title, so it sets the rule for every title after it.
Live-Action 2	THE FLASH	The CW, 2014–2023	The classic title of his comic since 1959, and the name of the 1990 CBS series, which gives it built-in recognition.
Live-Action 3	WONDER WOMAN	CBS → The CW, 2015–2021	Her iconic name and the title of her comic since 1942. Putting it on CBS echoes the network's own Wonder Woman series of the 1970s, which makes for great 2015 trade coverage.
Live-Action 4	JUSTICE SOCIETY OF AMERICA	The CW, 2016–2022	The team's full name, matching the comic title running in 2010. Promotions can use the logo shorthand JSA.
Live-Action 5	BLACK LIGHTNING	The CW, 2018–2021	His name and the title of his own comic since 1977.
Live-Action 6	BATWOMAN	The CW, 2019–2022	Her name and the title of her own comic. Her 2009–10 Detective Comics run is the series' source.
Animated 1	GREEN LANTERN	Cartoon Network, 2015–2016	The title of Hal Jordan's comic since 1960, written by Johns in the run this series adapts.
Animated 2	SHAZAM!	Cartoon Network, 2017–2018	Marvel owns the “Captain Marvel” trademark, so DC can't use it as a title. Shazam! is the title DC uses for his comics and the 1970s CBS series. In the show he is still called Captain Marvel.

Notes for the story's realism

- Green Lantern: in the real 2010, Warner Bros. is preparing the Green Lantern film (June 2011) and a Green Lantern CG animated series for Cartoon Network. In our alternate history, the 2015 DCTVU series is a new, canon-tied series, and trades will compare it to both.
- The Flash: in the real 2010, Warner Bros. still owns the 1990 CBS series, so reusing the title raises no rights issue.
- Wonder Woman: the NBC pilot being developed in 2010 would use the same title. Its fate is a storyline for our trades and headlines.

- Franchise umbrella: all eight series run under the shared banner “DC Television Universe” (DCTVU), which appears in promos and crossover marketing.
